When it comes to the knifing business, the less the Herald says in that respect the better. It actually refuses to run the congressional ticket and the county ticket of the Republican party. Where is the knifing then? It does not want the Republicans of the first congressional district, composed of eight counties, to vote for Doyener for congress. It does not recognize his candidacy. Why? Because it undertakes to say that less than a half dozen persons who manipulate that sheet comprise the Republican party in eight counties, instead of the thousands who reside in those counties. It is an assumption that shows the supreme selfishness of that little gang but, in truth, the real reason they do not support Doyener is that they want a Democrat elected. The same is true as to the Republican county ticket. They say they object to the nomination of these men, but they dare not say these are not good men. They had it into their heads that they would not oppose their nomination, but that they would support the Democratic ticket. The idea was passed round long before the primary election that they would all work for the support of the Democratic nominees and it was insisted by the president of the Herald and others that a Democratic sheriff must be elected. This was long before the Republican primary election, and this fact shows that they harp on the primary election business simply to mislead their readers and to cover up as much as possible the assassin's dirk they have up their sleeves so far as the Republican party politics are concerned.

That cutting out precinct idea still shows that Maxwell and Jarrett received the nomination by an overwhelming voice and since these precincts are objectionable to the News in respect to work the Prohibition party for the benefit of the Democratic party. They ought to have remembered what he did just before the Salem election, when he came all the way to the county seat to keep an alleged whiskey seller out of the polls, and from the circumstances, it was stated and never denied that he did it with a view to helping his election. Some one ought to have sprung that on him at the Prohibition convention. There is no use to mince words for facts are facts and nothing else can be made out of them. Randolph may think he is fooling the people but he is not.

Randolph may think he is fooling the people but he is not.

Men prominent in the Democratic party have their eyes opened at last to the conspiracy against the party in behalf of the few, who want to use the party to advance their own selfish interests. There are a few fellows in Clarksburg, who want to break into office and to control office, and, when these same fellows succeed, the people will have no more rights than the negro had in the times of slavery. It is assuring, however, that there is no possibility of their accomplishing their ambition. Their own party knows them too well to run the risk, and the country Democrats will come to the convention armed with a resistance that will make them take to the woods even faster than the Japanese are defeating the Russians. If the country Democrats do not control the county convention and name the nominees, it will be their own fault. They have the opportunity to put the little gang in the shade for all time, if they but try. All they have to do is to stick together.

To show the public just how much of a Republican paper the Herald is, it tells the public that one of the advantages of being deaf, to use its own words is that "you escape campaign oratory—especially Doyener's vulgar bull story." This is the manner of regard that sheet has for a Republican congressman, who has had the distinction of representing the first congressional district of West Virginia several years, and the district includes several of the best counties in the state. The little Democratic clique in this city has always been opposed to Doyener and that accounts largely for the Herald's attitude toward him. No Republican paper has the right to hold up to ridicule the choice of the party, and when it does so it fails to subscribe to the platform and principles of the party and when it does not subscribe to them, it is safe to say that it is not of the party and does not represent it.

Alas! It is too true, say some of the Democratic candidates for sheriff, who come to the city to find out to a certainty about the Telegram's remarks about the slate being fixed by the little Democratic clique, and to this they add that there is a worse combination of Democrats here than could possibly happen among Republicans. They are impressed with the statements of the Telegram to the effect that that little clique are in a conspiracy to beat them out of their rights, for they have found it already to be true. The matter was of such a serious nature that the Telegram would not dare treat it lightly and that is the reason we got positive facts before we told the public what this clique was up to. And what we said is corroborated by Democratic candidates themselves. What better proof now is needed?

What man is there in the country, who thinks that Ernest Randolph will vote any other than the Democratic ticket? Not one! Then why was he so active in the Prohibition convention? There is nothing plainer. He wants to work the Prohibition party for the benefit of the Democratic party. They ought to have remembered what he did just before the Salem election, when he came all the way to the county seat to keep an alleged whiskey seller out of the polls, and from the circumstances, it was stated and never denied that he did it with a view to helping his election. Some one ought to have sprung that on him at the Prohibition convention. There is no use to mince words for facts are facts and nothing else can be made out of them. Temperance is an entirely different thing from Democratic prohibition. If Ernest Randolph wanted to make a temperance speech at the Prohibition convention, well and good, but it certainly was presumptuous for him to make a party speech for them, unless he intends to vote the Prohibition ticket. He is in the habit of supporting the Democratic nominees, whether they are temperate or not, since it is supposed he voted the Democratic ticket the past several years. How about it, Mr. Randolph? You must show us as we are from Missouri on this question?

The wonderful results achieved by Prof. S. E. Swartz and the faculty at Broadbent Institute in the term just closed in the face of the numerous adversities and difficulties is a cause for gratification on the part of every one who has the interests of the college at heart as well as for congratulation to the professor and the teachers of the faculty for their abilities. It proves that Broadbent is under an unusually able management and the Telegram joins the many in expressing appreciation of the same.

We do not think there are many men in Harrison county who are opposed to temperance, unless they be some of the fellows who as Democrats attended the Prohibition convention in order to get it going their way. This does not apply either to Charley Short or Ernest Randolph, but it does to some of the so-called, who were there from the Democratic party and who are Democratic sympathizers. Let the preachers and real Prohibitionists who were there look them up and convince themselves.

Whenever the Telegram gets the Democratic papers cornered, they give their attention to the editors of the Telegram, thus hoping to evade the argument and draw the attention of their readers from the real issue. The main question and the all important one is not what the editors are or are not but what the paper itself says. The policy is the matter to be considered more than the personality of the editors

Ernest Randolph flung it into their faces at the Prohibition convention that he was born a Democrat and knew nothing else, and yet he was presumptuous enough to try to dictate to them. Ernest has been sent out to proselyte or rather to work the Prohibitionists, but when he wanted to be elected to office in Salem, he made a trip to Clarksburg to keep an accused whiskey seller out of jail.

From the tone of the News the Republican organization in this county runs even Democratic papers. That leads us to recall the remark by a prominent Democrat or two not long ago that prominent Republicans of the regular organization actually read the proofs of that sheet, before they went to press.

The News ought to be careful about giving secrets away, especially those that affect its own political standing.

The News now comes out with the assertion that the Republican organization has been running the Democratic party. If such is the case, the Republican organization certainly had poor taste. But, sincerely speaking, the Republican party has been running the Democratic party, that is, in the ground, for the benefit of the people.

Democrats went loaded for the Prohibition convention and landed out the dough, hoping to keep in their graces. The Democrats got it into their heads that nominations were going to be made and this was one course pursued to see if they could not buy the Prohibitionists, but the latter got suddenly wise and did not bite at the bait.

The Democratic politicians hovered around the Prohibition convention like vultures. They were there in full force to work the few Prohibitionists who happened to be present. Every last one of them will vote the Democratic ticket when the time comes and the Prohibitionists will be left in the cold.

If the Herald is a Republican paper, it will denounce the high-handed manner in which scheming Democrats tried to manipulate the affairs of the Prohibition convention, but it can not do that and be consistent, as some of its star performers were there acting with the Democrats.

Ehret and Randolph made a heavy team at the Prohibition convention. One said he was a born Democrat and knew nothing else and the other denied his religion some time ago. That is a pair for you, especially the a rat and he is like a buckwheat grain—three sided.

The Democratic clique had its lieutenants at the Prohibition convention and they nibbled whenever they had an opportunity. Some of them wanted to help write the resolutions, but they were afraid to come from under cover

The United States did not send several warships to Morocco's shores in order that Rasouli, the brigand, could see them. They were sent there in order that the Sultan might have an incentive inspiration at the sight.

They say Kendall, who manages the Herald, was at the Prohibition convention in the interests of the Democratic party. It looks that way and we see no reason to dispute it.

The English government loves Thibet with such intense ardor that it is sending reinforcements to its friendly invading army in order to strengthen its esteem.

The Democrats who subscribed to the Prohibition campaign fund before they knew the platform or the candidates showed they were there for a purpose and that was to work the convention
